Language: Multilingual.Baghdad (IraqiNews.com) At least 8 people, including a police officer, were killed in a suicide car-bomber attack outside an Iraqi army base in western Baghdad on Sunday morning. A security source from the western al-Hammariah district told IraqiNews.com that "two suicide bombers attacked an Iraqi army checkpoint at the entrance of Hilla (a district in the western outskirts of Baghdad) wounding three civilians and a police officer." "The three civilians managed to escape, but the police officer was killed," he added. Meanwhile, two suicide-bombers hit al-Intisar army base wounding three soldiers in Baghdad, a police officer said. Last month, authorities reportedly foiled an attempt to assassinate al-Sadr by a bomber driving a car packed with explosives. The failed assassination attempt happened two months after al-Sadr ordered his militia, al-Mahdi Army, to reduce violence in Baghdad. Violence in the Iraqi capital has eased slightly since the announcement of al-Sadr's call to "work to improve security in Baghdad and the provinces" to start a new cycle for calm in Iraq.Q: How to return the result of a function call? Leukotriene B4 (LTB4) is an important proinflammatory mediator, and functional polymorphisms in the LTB4 receptor 1 (BLT1) have been associated with chronic inflammatory diseases, particularly in patients with asthma. We hypothesized that BLT1, in collaboration with other proinflammatory signal transduction pathways, plays a crucial role in the LTB4-induced neutrophil chemotaxis. Using a humanized transgenic BLT1-GFP reporter mouse, we first showed that overexpression of BLT1 in neutrophils induces their chemotaxis, an effect reversed by a BLT1 inhibitor. This LTB4-induced neutrophil chemotaxis was prevented by transfection of plasmids encoding a dominant negative form of Akt (DN-Akt) or extracellular signal-regulated kinase (ERK). IKCa1 is the specific Ca<sup>2+</sup>-activated K+ channel essential for neutrophil chemotaxis and activation. As we previously demonstrated that IKCa1 was responsible for Ca<sup>2+</sup> influx during LTB4 chemotaxis, we assessed the effect of both the expression of IKCa1, or its inhibitor, iberoxin, on the chemotactic response to LTB4. In contrast to previous reports, we found that neither IKCa1 overexpression nor its inhibition modified the LTB4-induced chemotaxis. However, the IKCa1 inhibitor blocked the LTB4-induced ERK1/2 activation. The expression of the IKCa1 antagonist peptide, (i.e., the inhibitory peptide of IKCa1 channel, XE991) enhanced the migratory response to LTB4. Blocking ERK1/2 activation by PD98059 prevented the LTB4-induced neutrophil chemotaxis and enhanced the inhibitory peptide. The LTB4-induced neutrophil chem f678ea9f0e
